EPA honors shelf fish group for outreach

Posted: 05/26/2009 07:28:00 PM PDT

Palos Verdes. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has honored a local organization with its 2009 Citizen Excellence in Community Involvement Award.

The Palos Verdes Shelf Fish Contamination Education Collaborative was honored for its outreach to area communities about contaminated fish and marine life off the coast of Long Beach, San Pedro and Palos Verdes. The area suffers from industrial contamination - including the banned chemical DDT - dumped into local waters in the 1940s and early '80s.

The collaborative interacts with "at risk" communities, including local fishermen, and updates them on the dangers of consuming contaminated fish, and ways to protect their health.
